

Women's Equality Day

Each year on August 26, we recognize Women's Equality Day, a commemoration of the passage of the 19th amendment in 1920, which granted women in the United States the right to vote. This historic milestone marked a turning point in the fight for equality, acknowledging women's voices as vital in the shaping of our democracy.

While the day honors this achievement, it also serves as a reminder of the continued work needed to advance gender equality. Women have made significant strides in education, business, politics, and leadership, but challenges such as pay disparities and barriers to opportunity still remain.

Women's Equality Day is not only about looking back, but also about moving forward. It encourages us to celebrate the contributions and hard work of women past and present. It's also a recommitment to equality in every space
